This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Rec. April 2, 1907

Somerset Record Society.

In the preface to the last volume, I stated that the issue for 1906 would deal with the Quarter Sessions Records for the reign of James I. But the time taken in the preliminary work of flattening, preparing, and binding several thousand documents has made it necessary to put off the production of this work for another year. Mr. Green kindly came to my assistance, and in its place has provided a fourth volume of the valuable Pedes Finium for the first half of the fifteenth century. This particular period has, for reasons given in the preface to Vol. XX, hitherto been somewhat neglected, and it is hoped that, in conjunction with the first volume of Mediæval Wills, students of local history will be considerably aided in their researches. Judging from a wide, perhaps a superficial view, the tendency at this date was for land to become concentrated in fewer hands, owing to the ruin of the smaller proprietors consequent on the depreciation caused by the Pestilence in 1348–9. Another cause was the system of matrimonial alliances whereby the magnates sought to extend their power and influence in the state.

The Quarter Sessions Records, so far as they have been examined, are even richer in many details of local and social history than might have been imagined. The records already in print of the counties of Derby, Devon, Hertford, and Worcester have shown the nature and importance of the information contained therein, and Somerset will not fall behind.

When the cartularies of Athelney and Muchelney were printed in Vol. XIV, and a close search for the lost cartulary of Cleeve Abbey had proved useless, it was considered that this class of documents (with the notable exception of Glastonbury) had been worked out. But this summer a cartulary of the Priory of Minchin Buckland came to light, the very existence of which was unsuspected. By the kindness of the owner a transcript of this valuable document has been offered to the Council, and it will be printed at some future date.

The subscription list is still a cause of anxiety, as it seems impossible to check the slow progress of decay.

Among new subscribers are the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, and the University Library, Toronto, who have also obtained a complete set of the volumes already issued. It is probable, with the materials of study supplied for research, that the history of the County stands an excellent chance of being thoroughly investigated, and the distinctive and interesting features made known.

Preface.

The first point to which attention may be drawn here is the large increase in the number of manors dealt with, some of them being now unknown. With this comes for the first time the curious warranty against some expected claim of certain abbots, a position not clear save possibly when remembering the story of Robin Hood, where a knight having borrowed money on his estate, the day for payment arrived, when the abbot, sitting ready, says to his men: "but he come this yeke day, disheryte shall he be." The knight then enters, but the abbot supposing he would not pay, "lothely on hym gan looke and vylaynously him gan call." The first warranty is in 1427, perhaps a shadow of coming events.

The chivalers decrease in number, but the knights largely increase. An alphabetical list of these is given, as having a strong interest for many.

Then for the first time appears the title of esquire, the first so described being James Durburgh in connection with land at Wydecombe and Wyleton. The exact intention is not explained, but the position implied some service or commission under the crown, as in fact it should do to-day. The son of a knight, as now, was an esquire, the sons of Walter Rodney being both so described. Some ceremony, too, seems to have once been used and the king created by the gift of a silver collar. In an old ballad—"The Tanner of Tamworth"—we are told:—

> "'A coller, a coller,' our king gan cry,
> Quoth the tanner, 'It will breed sorrow,'
> 'Be not afraid, tanner,' said our king,
> 'So here I make thee the best esquire
> That is in the north countrie.'"

Also for the first time, but for twice only, appears the status of gentleman. In one case William Forster, senior, is a "gentilman," but William junior is a husbandman.

The lordship of Waysford mentioned had no connection with Somerset. It was, in fact, Wexford, and came through the Pembroke family to the Greys. In course of time by a division or settlement of lands the estate conferring the title passed to the Talbots. In 1446 the Earl of Shrewsbury is found so described, and his successors claim the title still, though there seems never to have been either a creation or a patent.

There may be some interest in the coming of Sir Richard Chokke at Stanton Drew. In his own cases noted he did not sit as a justice. John Inyn (the pronunciation of Onion) was also a judge.

Fine No. 66, p. 187, is nearly the same as No. 90, the latter being necessary apparently because in the first the rights of the heirs of Alianor were overlooked. This is the only difference save that a second and heavier payment was exacted, or at least is here recorded.

The words gorse and heath as translated may not necessarily be exactly so, but may be possibly broom or briars or any waste rough growth.

The appearance of the name of Chaucer must be noticed as something towards the claim or argument that the poet was of a Somerset family.

The usual guides to Bath give the origin of the name of the Cross bath to the time of James II., when the queen was supposed to have been made fruitful by its waters and a cross erected in the bath to commemorate the supposed event. It will be seen this idea must be given up as the name appears here in 1456.

An orchard is mentioned in 1471, and in 1414 eight acres of roses. From the name Hosewyfe or Husewyfe we get our Husey. One man is called cosmopolitanus.

By the use of north, south, etc., as a prefix, a place name becomes separated and indexed far apart. The plan, however, has been retained, as also other various spellings, as it is always unwise to tamper with an index.

Certain of the documents or parts of them being illegible, gaps occasionally occur, but by good fortune some of these have been filled from an unexpected source, too late met with, hence small slip of emendations.
